COMMITTEE RECEIVES VERY LITTLE EVIDENCE

All Testimony Ruled Out Where Judge Chichester's Connection Cannot Be Shown.

MANY EXCEPTIONS NOTED

Powell Tells Many Things He Is Prepared to Prove, but He Is Unable to Get Them Before Investigators.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] FREDERICKSBURG, VA., August 20.—The legislative committee investigating charges against Judge Chichester convened at 10 o'clock this morning. Mr. Stephenson presiding in the absence of Chairman Oliver, who was called to Fairfax by the death of his mother.

Gordon Jones, of King George, was the first witness. Questioned by Mr. Powell, he said he carried a petition to Judge Chichester asking for the appointment of G. Beckwith as a justice of the peace. Judge Chichester said he would attend to it, but later Jones heard that Mat Clift had been appointed. He said he did not know whether Judge Chichester belonged to a "ring" or "clique" in King George County or whether he was influenced by a "ring" or "clique" in making appointments. He did not know the politics of Clift. Questioned by Judge Embrey, he said he was a Republican, and usually voted a Republican ticket.

G. Beckwith, chairman of the Republican party of King George, was called. He said a petition was prepared in his behalf asking for his appointment as a justice of the peace. He said Judge Chichester told him there was nothing against him, but he was appointed. He said Judge Chichester added that there were already three in the district, but he could appoint another one. Judge Chichester told him he had forgotten about his petition. He said Thomas L. Hunter, E. C. S. Hunter and H. Potts were considered leaders of the Martin faction of the Democratic party in King George. Potts was on the jury, and was elected every grand jury, and was on the petit jury. He did not know whether Tom or Fred Hunter advocated the appointment of Clift, neither did he know if there were any Martin people in King George. He had been in the county nine years, and came from Minnesota.

Gordon Shelton, of King George, said he called with Judge Chichester about the appointment of Beckwith. The judge said he could not appoint him as there were already three; that there would soon be an election, and the people could elect their own magistrates.

AGAIN NOTED EXCEPTION TO "RING" EVIDENCE RULING John S. Shelton, of King George, said he signed the petition for Beckwith. He never had a talk with Judge Chichester about any case he expected to have in court. He had not had a case in Judge Chichester's court.

Mr. Powell consulted a number of witnesses from King George, and then stated that the ruling of the committee on the testimony of King George witnesses applied to the witnesses present also, and that it would be unnecessary to put them on the stand. He again noted exception to the ruling which excluded testimony showing the general reputation of Judge Chichester as a "ring" man. Mr. Powell said he expected to show that Joseph Kronk was a prominent, and did not vote for W. S. Embrey for the Legislature. He was displaced as judge of election after that. He could not show by direct testimony that Judge Chichester was connected with this matter, as required by the committee. Therefore, he would not put Mr. Kronk on the stand. The same applied to Larkin Pritchett and A. S. Raines. Mr. Powell said he decided to prove by several witnesses that the name of R. L. Embrey was erased from the voting list by some one on the day the list was delivered to the secretary of the electoral board, but he could not prove that Judge Chichester was connected with the act in any way or had any knowledge of it, and, as the committee had ruled out the evidence, he noted another exception.

Odd Collar and Cuffs Charm of New Model

Distinguished by the collar of yellow velvet is a suit of blue gabardine. The velvet hat is fur trimmed.

A good deal of the charm of new models is contributed by the oddity of collar, cuffs and pocket features.

In the sketch it is the collar that immediately attracts attention. It is of yellow panne velvet, crossed by stitched cords, and the shape is contrived so that the neck and chin are wholly concealed, but unconstricted. The cuffs are of velvet, too, but untrimmed.

Blue gabardine is the suit fabric, the skirt with uneven hem, the coat with the new shield front. The hat has a crown of shirred velvet, banded with fur.

An attempt at murder. He said Bayne was tried and fined $100 and then freed by Judge Chichester. He said Bayne's wife was a cousin of Judge Chichester, and that his fine was reduced by the Governor to $25. Mr. Stephenson, of the committee, said the committee could not go behind the trial of the court unless corruption could be shown. Mr. Powell asked that five witnesses of Judge Chichester be heard, and the committee said the request was unreasonable, but if the prosecution desired to put the Commonwealth's attorney on the stand and ask if the judge interfered in his producing evidence, he might do so.

Mr. Powell asked that Buck Harfield be summoned to give testimony in the case of Hicks v. Sorrell in Spotsylvania Circuit Court. Mr. Powell claimed that Judge Chichester refused to hear argument or read the depositions. The committee informed Mr. Powell that if he could get the witness he would be heard, but that the committee could not send for him at this late date.

INTEREST IN CASE SEEMS TO BE WAXING The attendance on proceedings this afternoon was much smaller than usual, and interest seems to be waxing. The proceedings at times are very dry and long-drawn out. There was much delay at one time this afternoon, owing to lack of witnesses to be examined. The committee decided that newspaper articles on the subject of the appointment of Judge Waller and signing petitions in regard to the same, were irrelevant if not brought home to Judge Chichester, and therefore were ruled out.

Mr. Powell offered in evidence a petition signed by a number of voters protesting against the appointment of Judge Waller as Commonwealth's attorney after the appointment had been made. This was ruled out, as the petitioners were never presented to Judge Chichester, and had never been sworn by him. Mr. Powell noted an exception to both rulings.

The committee reconsidered and decided that extracts from letters published in newspapers, be admitted. This was done, so that no question can be raised in the future as to what the letters referred to.

Mr. Powell offered as evidence two deeds in a case in the Spotsylvania Circuit Court, in which Lee J. Embrey was attorney, and endeavored to prove a charge that Judge Chichester allowed attorneys in his court to speculate in the subject matter of suits. The deeds were ruled out, as it was admitted by Mr. Powell that the case had never been brought to Judge Chichester's attention.

L. M. Jones, the next witness questioned by Mr. Powell, said he was a Democrat. When he made application to have Judge Chichester restore his name to the voting list, Fred Frazer accompanied him. Judge Chichester inquired whether Jones's taxes had been paid, and when told by Frazer they had been, ordered his name placed on the list.

Mr. Powell asked for the order appointing Emerson Purks on the electoral board of King George, and that showing his election as constable, and he was later appointed on the electoral board by Judge Chichester. Judge Embrey admitted that Judge Chichester had appointed Clift justice of peace to fill the vacancy. Powell reviewed the charge of nepotism, read the names of several relatives of Judge Chichester who holds office, closing with the name of R. C. L. Moncre, collector of internal revenue.

Mr. Stephenson asked if Judge Chichester appointed Mr. Moncre, Mr. Powell said "no," but he mentioned him as being in office. The charge was not further pressed by Powell.

A. B. Yates, clerk of the Corporation Court of Fredericksburg, was sworn and asked to produce orders entered by Judge Chichester for the time he served as judge when Judge Goodrick was sick. Mr. Stephenson announced that the committee could not go behind the order of Judge Goodrick ordering the payment of $110 to Judge Chichester for forty-one days for presiding in the Corporation Court, and refused to consider the reading of the records of the clerk into the records of the investigation. The committee also decided not to summon Judge Goodrick.

Colonel Newhouse, sergeant-at-arms, was instructed to summon certain other witnesses, and the committee adjourned until Saturday morning.
